This de-escalation follows ASEAN member states stepping in and urging them to show restraint, as when it comes to peace and stability in the region it is ASEAN who steps in before international forum reat.

As it was the US that has instigated the Philippines in provoking China, it also does not want the Philippines to go so far that a conflict could break out! US is not willing to sacrifice its interests for the interests of the Philippines; but if the US does not join the fight, then it will lose trust and influence over its allies. Similarly, Taiwan's ruling Democratic Progressive Party (DPP) candidate Lai Ching-te was proclaimed the victor of the regional election on the island by the Taiwanese Central Election Commission on January 13. Not long after his victory, Lai proclaimed during a press conference that he and his colleagues will "protect Taiwan from China's continued threats and intimidation."

So far, it seems that the newly elected DPP "will continue to occupy the Presidential Office and do the bidding of the United States or maybe American leaders found it to their advantage to set a puppet government in the shoreline of China just to irritate them!

And it is pertinent to note that South Korea, Japan and the Philippines," three countries "heavily occupied by American troops.

So the fear that Americans are using Taiwanese people as geopolitical pawns has reasons behind that thought!

As such United States, is involved in two major crises, viz Ukraine and the Middle East, so they might not want to be involved in Taiwan crisis for now. But as there is the American presidential elections around the corner, well a new diversionary complexity in Asia region will help present President Biden to get a image makeover with these dubious political conundrum.

The US is keen to build relations with ASEAN nations partnership for prosperity, creating jobs on both sides of the Pacific. More than 6,200 U.S. companies operate across ASEAN's member states, employing nearly 1 million people, and all 50 U.S. states export to ASEAN, supporting more than 625,000 U.S. jobs.

of the 10 countries in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, the U.S. is the most influential power in only two: the Philippines, which is a U.S. treaty ally, and Singapore, which is a staunch U.S. partner. Even in these states, Washington only barely finishes on top. In Thailand, another U.S. treaty ally, China is now more influential.

The US is under check for now despite the fact that many states in Southeast Asia, like Vietnam, Malaysia and Indonesia, are clearly terrified of China's assertive military actions.

Let's not forget that U.S. remains the dominant military power for many Southeast Asian states, although Washington is slipping in this measure as well. Indonesia and Vietnam have opted for somewhat closer military cooperation with the U.S. in recent years, though they have remained careful not to antagonise Beijing in doing so.
